What Darwin Could Not Have Known

A Journey to the Spiritual Interior of Evolution

By Gerrit Teule

Following a long journey around the world, Darwin convincingly described the evolution of the natural forms. Following his death, many new scientific ideas emerged such as relativity, quantum physics, the Big Bang, and the evolution of consciousness. The eon-hypothesis, published by the physicist Jean Charon, describes the evolution of consciousness in crystal-clear terms, down to the smallest detail of physics. The will to develop consciousness propels this evolution onwards. This book gives an in-depth description of the detail, speed and precision of the interactions between body and mind using all the possibilities of the electromagnetic force and non-local communication via an imaginary dimension of space, and since it deals with more than just material aspects, is able to reconcile creationism with scientific evolutionary theory.
